Your comment: As long as the financial mafia is allowed total control of the commodity markets, there will be no real recovery.

Historical high cost at a time when wages are deflating is not a remedy for economic recovery.

They caused this melt down and are prolonging and preventing recovery by artificially inflating cost, adding no value, other to their own pockets.

As a small metal furniture maker, today's metal cost are 300% more than in 2006. Health cost have also tripled in five years, in anticipation of the "American Hustle" call Obamacare. Revenues are at decades lows as cost are at all time highs.

Is it any wonder why wages are deflating and employment is lackluster? High cost is holding the economy hostage.

Kill commodity manipulation and drastically cut QE before the hole becomes too deep to crawl out of.
