Dear Email comments,

My credit card company sent me the most ridiculous rule change I've seen yet. They now want to charge me a "currency conversion fee" when I use my credit card outside of the United States. American buying power is inherently dependent upon using a credit card for purchases. We live in a cashless society. Reducing the ability, or wherewithal, to use a credit card for purchases, including overseas, will definitely impact the global economy and America's ability to continue to compete in the world markets.

Sincerely,

Mr. Christopher Jakobsson
