

Subject: Regulation AA

OK let me tell you my side of this overdraft mess.

With fuel prices being so high all of my expendable money goes into my gas tank. This has a cascading effect, my gas bill last month was 575.00 dollars, for two vehicles and my wife works from home. This equates to less money in my account to cover my other bills, which means I have to float my bills till I have the money in the account, sometimes, most times they are late.

You can just imagine what happens to my already meager dollar then. The bank charges 39.00 dollars for a late fee, whatever interest they are going to hit me with and a very very small portion goes to my principal. At this rate it will take me whats left of my life to pay off those cards, as if the interest wasn't bad enough. Our economy is failing and everyone is still grabbing the pie leaving all the working joe's to work more jobs if they can find them.

If we cant get this resolved with our greedy banks and the fuel companies, you can be assured of one thing CIVIL WAR!!! We are tired of taking it in the rear by our so called brothers!

Sincerely,
Marco Bisogno
