Comments:

The overdraft fees are ridiculous as they are assessed in the order the bank wants the checks to pay off of your account. They are always from the largest to the smallest which, in my opinion, should be the opposite. You may not know when an electronic funds transfer (EFT) will post but you do have enough money to clear all of the items you issued but when it comes to EFT's you never know when they are going to clear your bank account. It would be great to know what is pending on your account so you can have a chance to either transfer money or make a deposit before the end of day's business.
