

From: S. Almond
Subject: Electronic Fund Transfers

Comments:

My account is with Bank of America. You may have 8 transactions that are already pending on your account against your balance and you are not over drawn. If you overdraw, even by a few cents, they pay the one that overdraws and charge you $30 for each of the other 8. That is nothing more than stealing. If the money is there for the pending charges, then they should be paid. They simply move everything around, so that they can steal the most money from you that they possibly can. I have often wondered why Congress or someone doesn't step in and put a stop to it. And on top of all that, we are being forced to give them even more of our money in the bailout because they mismanaged what they had. Unbelievable. Please someone stop this legalized robbery.

S. Almond