What in the world ever happened to "banking regulations"? At one time there were stringent laws keeping banks from doing what they are right now....killing the public with hidden charges, etc, or making due dates on Sundays or holidays so you'll be forced to pay a late charge unless you pay the bill 7-10 days before the due date...all for the almighty buck. As far as the mandatory "overdraft protection", when I buy a blouse, it isn't MANDATORY that I buy the pants to go with the purchase. This is flat "legal" stealing from the public.
