I am a student and had over $400 in overdraft fees from my bank this past fall. Not from my mishap, or miscalculations of money management, but from another company (that currently has a 50 million dollar lawsuit against them) that was taking money, monthly, out of my account thus making me in the negative. well, when this happened MY OWN BANK, (whom i have banked with for four years) did not even tell me i was over, or in the red and the next time i looked on my account i had a -175.00. really? I finally googled the company that was taking money out of my account and found an ample amount of information regarding their practices, and finally settled the matter and became free from their monthly charges. But still my bank would not give me ANY grace! I was 19, (now 20) and really? I am a student with bills and lets be real- how big is a students income? not much at al,l if any! needless to say i closed my accounts, (had to go to california to do it), as well as my savings account. I have been free from that banking system and have not been in a system for about five months and love it. free from charge. free from fraud. free from inequitable, asinine, money hungry, careless imbeciles who notably do not care for the welfare of others. sincerely yours!
