I believe that the overdraft protection would be ok, except that the bank does not typically notify the person a day or two later by mail or in the bank account mail system. I believe the mail system can forward to a text message, but there is no telling how fast that would arrive to a person.

If the bank had a quick way of notifying people (via text message etc), this would be a great way of notifying people that they are about to overdraft.

Thank you,
