I'm tired of banks having complete control of how my monetary transactions are handled. In multiple instances, I've had my bank hold onto smaller transactions until a larger one clears, having each of the smaller ones appear as negatives and charging me fees for overdraft. Transactions should be weighed in the order they were completed, and if the bank is aware that I've already spent $99 of the $100 I have, they should not be allowed to let another $30 transaction.
