Comments:

I think there should be an overdraft charge; however, the account holder should be notified and/or their transaction not go through. Too bad, if the person is embarrassed! I feel it is the account holder's responsibility to know when their account is low. Back in the "good old days" you only knew when you called your bank or face to face with the teller. What was bad; however, was not knowing until you received your bank statement 30 days later and didn't realize you added or subtracted incorrectly! Thank you for allowing for me to voice my opinion.
