Federal Reserve Board

Dear Federal Reserve Board:

Do I trust the treasury or the US congress. The answer is no. The legislative branch of the US government is bought and paid for.

The current current financial woes of this country would be well on the way to being correct if the US congress had passed common sense ethical usury laws six months ago but that is impossible because they are bought and paid for by the multinational corporations, the multinational banks, and the multinational insurance underwriters

None of this is that difficult if the people behind the legislations are not bought and paid for and have common sense and basic ethics

Sincerely,

Ralph O. Dreifus Jr
