

From: Zane Wubben
Subject: Electronic Fund Transfers

Comments:

I hate Wachovia bank. I had just withdrawn all my money to move it to a local credit union. When I went to withdraw my money I had them give me thousands of dollars in 10s and 20s to piss them off, because I hate Wachovia so much.

I worked the math out so when I withdrew all my money I would have a $0 balance. Even called to speak with customer service twice and they confirmed the amount I needed to withdraw in order to not overdraft my account which I was closing, yet they still found a way to charge me overdraft fees. I told the bank that obviously no wonder they got bought out with their business practices. I further told the rep. to not bother sending me the overdraft bill, but to instead send it directly to the White House. I refuse to pay it.

Maybe Obama should have thought about the reason commercial banks need bailing out is because they screw over their customers, who in return screw them over by not paying these erroneous fees. I am proposing everyone in the USA forward your delinquent bills, defaulted mortgage payments and students loans to Obama at the White House, so he can bailout the people who elected him rather than using their hard earned cash to bailout the very banks that continue to screwover the people of this country.

Join a local credit union. They are in business to serve you.

Hope the above experience and following perspective urges action to STOP these type of business practices. It's not about what's best for the banks, it's about the people.