Comments:

My name is Nancy Hersage

I am writing to ask the members of the government agencies, which were designed to protect ordinary American citizens from greed and excess in our financial institutions, to do your jobs.

Years ago, banks were members of communities. Currently, I keep my money in a credit union, which is a local institution, and which is also nonprofit. I avoid banks because they have become nationalized corporate predators, taking in money from their customers in order to enhance profits for shareholders and banking executives. THESE INSTITUTIONS HAVE NO ROOTS IN THE COMMUNITY AND NO REGARD FOR THE PEOPLE WHOSE MONEY THEY HANDLE.

But I am often forced to deal with banks for some services, including mortgages.

It's time that our government regulators see these predators for who they are and keep them from eating their customers and our economy alive. If you do not meet your responsibilities, we have NO ONE TO PROTECT US. That is the job of government -- to provide for the national security and our common interests as citizens of this nation.

We have no common interest in feeding the financial beast which preys on us as individuals and our common economy. Our common interest is to keep these executives and their stockholders in check. Banks were once important parts of our local communities, small businesses that shared a common interest with the people they served. No longer. Now they are impersonal, profit-at-any-cost financial beasts who many regulators and members of Congress seem happy to let roam at will.

Please, do your jobs and cage these multi-national corporations.

Sincerely,
