Re: Liquidity Coverage Ratio: Liquidity Risk Measurement, Standards, and Monitoring
(OCC Docket ID 2013 – 0016; FRS Docket No. R-1466; FDIC RIN 3064-AE04)

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The undersigned organizations¹ (Signatories) are pleased to provide additional clarifications to the comments filed on January 31, 2014 regarding the joint notice of proposed rulemaking (Proposed Rule) by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (FRS), the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) (and collectively, the “Agencies”), entitled “Liquidity Coverage Ratio: Liquidity Risk Measurement, Standards, and Monitoring”. In the enclosed letter, the Signatories are recommending that two technical changes be made to the Proposed Rule: (1) amend the treatment of certain special purpose vehicles (SPEs) and the corresponding outflow treatment; and (2) revise the outflows methodology as it applies to certain commercial real estate (CRE) products that have given conditionality features.

Discussion of Recommendations

- (1) Revision of Definition of SPE and Outflow Treatment – After speaking with the Agencies on several occasions, the Signatories believe that it was the regulators’ intent not to capture all SPEs in the most punitive bucket for outflows – 100%. As noted in the comment letter of January 31, oftentimes commercial real estate property is owned by an SPE that is legally the contractual borrower in a financing arrangement. However, in this case, the SPE is an operating vehicle and not a securitization or structured product trust.

We would like to offer proposed rule language as a way to avoid incorrectly bucketing of these vehicles by the covered institutions. In crafting the proposed rule language, we attempted to be as faithful as possible to existing format and terminology. However, there may be some confusion in the resulting proposal. In fact, the CRE Finance Council intends that CRE land facilities should be accorded the 10% treatment (if not the below outlined in item # 2) where they are extended for the purposes of providing credit, and that such facilities, where extended for the purposes of providing short-term liquidity, should be assigned the 30% outflow assumption. Please find this language attached in Appendix 1.

(2) Recommendation for Alternate Treatment of Construction Lending under Outflows Methodology – As explained to the Agencies on February 25 in a meeting, certain CRE-related credit products² have conditionality features that require extended timelines from request to disbursement to accommodate the lender’s due diligence. Borrowers and properties must meet certain thresholds in order to qualify for further drawdowns, often requiring more than 30 days, and reducing the volume of outflows.

As a general rule, most CRE facilities would be accorded the 10% outflow rate. Based on an informal survey of large, covered banks, the draw down rate is usually less than 5% in any given month. As such, a 5% outflow rate would calibrate LCR better with actual industry experience and still exceed actual volume in most cases.

An outsized outflow rate, when coupled with the punitive treatment that construction lending receives under Basel III risk-based capital rules (150%), the sector is exposed to significant cost burdens. The LCR, of course, has a different purpose, but given the control that banks have over the construction draw process, drawdowns progress at a slow pace.

The above approach, however, is static and does not reflect changes in volume. As a second option, the Agencies could use the drawdowns from the 30 days prior as the outflow amount for the next 30 days. In this way, the measurement becomes dynamic and is capable of reflecting changes in outflows due to seasonality and cyclicity.

The Signatories appreciate the Agencies willingness to consider these recommendations, and we would be glad to answer any questions regarding the enclosed.

Sincerely,

Commercial Real Estate Finance Council
National Apartment Association
National Multifamily Housing Council
The Real Estate Roundtable

(5) Collateral substitution. (i) 0 percent of the fair value of collateral posted to the [BANK] by a counterparty that the [BANK] includes in its HQLA amount as level 1 liquid assets, where under the contract governing the transaction the counterparty may replace the posted collateral with assets that qualify as level 1 liquid assets without the consent of the [BANK];

(ii) 15 percent of the fair value of collateral posted to the [BANK] by a counterparty that the [BANK] includes in its HQLA amount as level 1 liquid assets, where under the contract governing the transaction the counterparty may replace the posted collateral with assets that qualify as level 2A liquid assets without the consent of the [BANK];

(vi) 35 percent of the fair value of collateral posted to the [BANK] by a counterparty that the [BANK] includes in its HQLA amount as level 2A liquid assets, where under the contract governing the transaction the counterparty may replace the posted collateral with assets that qualify as level 2B liquid assets without the consent of the [BANK];

(vii) 85 percent of the fair value of collateral posted to the [BANK] by a counterparty that the [BANK] includes in its HQLA amount as level 2A liquid assets, where under the contract governing the transaction the counterparty may replace the posted collateral with assets that do not qualify as HQLA without the consent of the [BANK];

(viii) 0 percent of the fair value of collateral posted to the [BANK] by a counterparty that the [BANK] includes in its HQLA amount as level 2B liquid assets, where under the contract governing the transaction the counterparty may replace the posted collateral with assets that qualify as HQLA without the consent of the [BANK];
