RE: Comments Regarding Revisions to the Regulations Implementing the CRA

Dear Officials of Federal Bank and Thrift Agencies:

On behalf of the Fair Housing Council of the San Fernando Valley, I urge you to withdraw the proposed changes to the Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) regulations and to instead adopt changes that would enhance and improve CRA and similar fair lending principals. The Community Reinvestment Act has been instrumental in increasing access to homeownership, access to financial services in underserved communities, developing multi-family housing, boosting economic development, and expanding small businesses in the nation's minority, immigrant, and low- and moderate-income communities. Low income and people of color communities have utilized CRA as a tool to contest redlining and discrimination in their communities.

The Fair Housing Council, of the San Fernando Valley is a private, non-profit agency that provides education, counseling, investigation, and legal referrals to persons who believe they are victims of housing, insurance and mortgage lending discrimination. The Council provides education, training and counseling to private housing providers, real estate and mortgage lending professionals and the general public regarding their rights and obligations under federal and state fair lending laws.

Our agency, which is celebrating its 45th anniversary this year, is committed to the principals of expanding and promoting equal access to credit and financial services without regard to race, color, religion, gender, national origin, familial or disability status, disability, sexual orientation, age, marital status and source of income. The Council believes that the proposed changes will work against these principals and adversely affect communities of color, women and low and moderate-income communities.

I do not agree with the proposed changes that intend to: 1) increase the asset threshold from $250 million to $500 million for banks to be eligible for small bank exam; and 2) establish a weak predatory lending compliance standard under CRA.

Furthermore, I urge the federal regulators to reconsider the rejection of a proposal, which would have tied a bank's CRA obligations to its market share in a given area, rather than just the location of its branches. In California, Countrywide Home Loans and JP Morgan Chase are two such entities that despite the high number of loans made in the state, they have no CRA obligations. The agencies also failed communities by continuing to allow banks to elect to include affiliates on CRA exams at their option. Banks have the ability to manipulate their CRA exams by excluding affiliates not serving low- and moderate-income borrowers and/or those engaged in predatory lending. The federal regulators should require that all affiliates be included on exams.

Small Bank Exams

Under the current CRA regulations, large banks with assets of at least $250 million are rated by performance evaluations that scrutinize their level of lending, investing, and services to low- and moderate-income communities. The proposed changes will eliminate the investment and service parts of the CRA exam for banks and thrifts with assets between $250 and $500 million. The proposed changes will also no longer reference affiliations with holding companies. It is expected that these proposed changes would create streamlined exams for 1,111 banks that account for more than $387 billion in assets.

The elimination of the investment and service tests for more than 1,100 banks translates into considerably less access to banking services and capital for underserved communities. For example, these banks would no longer be held accountable under CRA exams for investing in Low Income Housing Tax Credits, New Market Tax Credits and equity investments in Community Development Financial Institutions (CDFIs). Such investments have promoted economic development and multi-family affordable housing development. Banks in this new category would no longer be held accountable for the provision of bank branches and checking/deposit accounts. Many banks with assets between $250 to $500 million are located in rural areas. These banks would no longer be required to have a continuing and affirmative obligation to serve the investment and deposit needs of all the communities in which they are chartered and from which they take deposits.

Predatory Lending

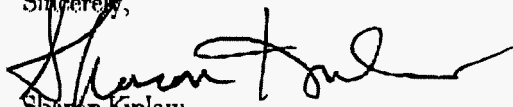

The proposed CRA changes contain an anti-predatory screen that will actually perpetuate abusive lending. The proposed standard defines "predatory" loans as those based on the foreclosure value of the collateral and the borrower's ability to repay. Both conditions have to be met before the regulators will downgrade on an exam. The asset-based standard creates a de-facto definition of predatory lending without taking into account other predatory tactics. These tactics include: 1. Targeting of minorities, low-income, and the elderly for sub-prime lending; 2. Originating sub-prime loans to borrowers that could qualify for prime loans; 3. Prepayment penalties; 4. Encouraging borrowers to refinance unsecured debt as a means of increasing the loan size and related point, fees, and commissions; 5. Selling of single credit insurance products as part of the home loan; 6. Mandatory arbitration provisions; 7. Excessive points and fees; 8. Yield spread premium payments or other compensations that rewards brokers for steering borrowers to higher cost products and larger loans; and 9. Purchasing and investing in predatory loans as part of a mortgage backed security.

Any standard that does not address the aforementioned nine tactics will allow CRA exams to be used to cover up predatory lending practices. Rigorous fair lending audits and severe penalties on CRA exams for abusive lending are necessary to ensure that low income and people of color borrowers are protected.

Conclusion

The proposed changes regarding streamlined exams and the anti-predatory lending standard threaten CRA's statutory purpose of the safe and sound provision of credit and deposit services. Full compliance with CRA regulations needs to occur where lending and profit making activities take place in substantial proportion. The proposed data enhancements would become much more meaningful if the agencies update procedures regarding assessment areas, affiliates, and the treatment of high cost loans and purchases on CRA exams. CRA gives ordinary the citizens the opportunity to have a voice regarding a bank's lending, investment and service components. Thank you for your attention to this critical matter.

Sincerely,
