Subject: Truth in Lending

To whom it may concern

While discussing credit card company abuses, I have another tactic that may be of interest. I recently received a new card in the mail from Citibank, unsolicited. I do not, nor have I ever had, an account with them. It had an activation sticker(call to activate) and a $7500 credit limit. It required a phone call to confirm I didn't want the card.

I hope you find this as concerning as I do.
