Subject: Truth in Lending

It is somewhat encouraging to see politicians doing something that will actually benefit the general public, rather than perpetuate their own political careers or run for the White House. I know of no other profession where once you get the job, that you delegate the majority of the work to subordinates and spend the majority of your time trying to get a better job, i.e.: all those that aspire to become President. It is extremely difficult to have an optimistic view of the future of our country when that very future is in the hands of the self-serving and morally bankrupt politicians currently in Washington. I have been extremely proud of this country of ours and have fought for its' freedom. I fear however that those that seek political careers today are for the most part doing so for all the wrong reasons. I understand I am preaching to the choir and with that said, do you think you folks could sing God Bless America and reflect on all that has made us the greatest nation the world. I think Dylan said it best, "we're only a pawn in their game."

Sincerely,
David G. Debonzo
