Subject: Truth in Lending

I would be sorely disappointed if our "elected" officials who are supposed to be serving the needs of their respective states did not address the outrageous business practices of today's credit card companies. I find it absurd that these companies are allowed to "suit" their needs as they deem appropriate. What would happen if business just decided to stop paying taxes to the federal government because they felt like the business climate was not in their favor? Why can't we just change how we pay taxes? There needs to be oversight of credit card companies starting immediately.

Sincerely,

A concerned citizen who has little faith left in Washington...
