Comments:

Please make these credit card companies finally accountable for their usury practices. It is far too long overdue, that regulation and restrictions be put on these types of loan shark tactics. I am a responsible self employed financial consultant, that has NEVER been late on a payment. I've recently ran up my cards as I was remodeling 2 homes. I've just been informed by Chase that my rate will jump 10%+. Outraged, I paid off and closed the account, but after 15 years of carrying an account with them, this was imposed on me because of information sharing by these companies, and their assumption that now I'm more of a credit risk therefore the higher rate. This also seems contrary to logic, as if your need to use more credit at one point or another in life as for an emergency, the credit card companies make it much more difficult to pay it off. Something has to be done. Please pass this
