Subject: Truth in Lending

I am outraged by the amount of resources, time and money that is being wasted in an effort to prevent law abiding citizens from playing a card game. I do not support a government that continues to make laws that take away our freedom. Private businesses are now being forced into becoming police agencies and given the right to investigate and monitor how we spend our money. This is an impossible task and will only lead to mass confusion within banking and financial institutions and give them the ability to use this to their benefit. They can stop payments and hold on to funds at their discretion until each transaction is deemed "legal." They will profit and citizens will suffer.

It makes more sense to legalize, regulate and tax internet gambling. The revenue generated from this would go a long way to help our failing government. If you haven't noticed, you are spending more money than you have. Why don't you start spending time passing laws that will be beneficial and generate revenue. Stop worrying about a game of cards and focus on life and death matters like the war!
