Comments:

It's past time to do something about the credit card companies' deceptive practices. My cc company, The Furniture Row express money card, "schedules" any on-line payments they receive for two days after the payment has actually been made. This often times will cause the payment to be late. If you try to call with a payment, a "processing" fee is charged to you to post the payment by the next day. How can these practices still be legal?
