Please make the disclosure notices shorter and in larger type. Also, these are written by lawyers, but I should not have to be a lawyer to understand them. One of the reasons for your existence (government) is to regulate. Witness, for example, what has been going on in the financial markets. If you had been doing your job, a lot of what has gone down in the last few years would not have come to pass. If laws are not on the books to enable you to regulate, then they must be written. Only a fool would believe that any business has the consumer's best interest at heart. A business exists to make money, but there must be rules, and they must tilt towards the consumer. This will, in the long run, be of greater benefit to business. I will not give you the answer as to how this will help business. Think about it and you will find the answer.
