Dear Email comments,

It is long past due to review the abusive practices of the credit card companies and reign in their predatory practices. The banks spent hundreds of millions of dollars to get special legislation passed that they had been unable to accomplish under the previous administration. If the credit card companies have a problem with bad credit then they should be more selective to whom they issue cards. They were given an inch but have now taken a mile. It's time for a radical change.

Sincerely,
