

From: "KRISTINE M SMITH" <kristinemsmith@msn.com> on 07/24/2008 10:30:09 AM

Subject: Regulation AA

Don't You Dare!

Consumers are getting gouged left and right and the banking industry is thinking of treating customers the way it and others treated people wanting to buy a new home (predatory lending). At what point are we going to start living the Judeo-Christian ethic of treating our neighbors as ourselves and not gouging them every time they need to do business with us?

Shame, shame! What the banking industry is proposing is a disgrace. You know it and I know it. Bed mattresses are looking a lot better these days as far as "saving money" goes. Where will this end if people don't start treating others according to tenets we learned as children in school, church and synagogue?

Consider me wildly opposed to what is being proposed, and sign me....

Kristine M Smith

Kristine M Smith, Author of
DeForest Kelley: A Harvest of Memories;
Let No Day Dawn that the Animals Cannot Share; Floating Around Hollywood and Other Totally-True
Tales of Triumph; and Purposeful Christianity: Sharing the Verve and Value of the Prince of Peace

See book description, reviews and order online at <http://www.netcomuk.co.uk/~mdownes/kris/kristinesmith.html>

Visit my blog at <http://almostfamousbydefault.blogspot.com>