Federal Reserve Board Email comments

Dear Email comments,

There are clearly many sleazy fine-print practices used by some (I suspect most) credit card companies to extract money from people beyond what most thought they had signed up for. (I should single out USAA, a fine and honorable company, as a notable exception to these practices.) Most people work way too hard for their money to have it filched away by those whose contribution to our society is questionable at best. Please enact this legislation.

Sincerely,

Mr. William Griffith
