Subject: Regulation AA

Federal Reserve Board Email comments

Dear Email comments,

We wholeheartedly support your proposed rules. In addition, however, we believe that you should require credit-reporting agencies to pay consumers a fee, whenever they sell personal consumer credit information that has not been requested or authorized by the consumer. That's our private data. It is not the property of the agencies.

Moreover, these agencies should make it easier for consumers to obtain their annual, free credit report. Currently, when you go to one of their websites (especially Experian), it is virtually impossible to detect how to obtain your free credit report.

Sincerely,

Mr. Robert+Julia Kenny+Glover
