Federal Reserve Board Email comments

Dear Email comments,

We strongly urge you to pass the proposed Federal Reserve rules to protect consumers from credit card abuse. While we have always paid our balance, we have watched the barrage of credit card offers to our daughters when they were still teenagers, continuing to this day since then. The ads are deceptive, promising low interest (for a short time)and easy credit.

As with the mortgage lending industry, credit card companies lure people who do not have the resources to accumulating credit card debt, raising interest rates and giving little time to pay the bill. While I am okay with private businesses trying to make a profit, this has become a sleazy industry - preying on young and people who have little money management experience.

Please act on these rules without weakening them and make credit cards adhere to some standards of responsibility and ethical practices.

Sincerely,

Ms. marty Curry
