Comments:

Overdue changes. Since the Supreme Court took away the ability of states to regulate usury, the banks, savings associations and credit unions have run amok. When I went to high school (long ago), a check put in the mail counted as paid. Now, if the financial institution doesn't receive it, I get charged interest. I've noticed that the due date is a Sunday. How am I supposed to do that? If it arrives Monday, I'm late. Even if it arrives Saturday, it's late because mail isn't delivered to businesses on Saturday. And, if I pay on line, they want to charge a "convenience fee." Thank you for taking on these robbers.
