Comments:

Customers are fooled by the go ahead and write it theory, we'll cover the check even though it throws you into the negative. Customers can appreciate the banks supposed one on one personal banking with a customer, when really it is just enticing them to write the check to collect the $35 and as BB&T does, hits you with another $30, so many days later ! Please, pay the check and charge me but through my calculations it is the push of a button as computers go, that doesn't cost $35. If the Fed Reserve would like to do something, put a cap on these type charges. Let's don't even talk about when they run it through and then automatically run it through again for the additional $35 or so ! Happens all the time ! As for what you mentioned about putting checks through high to low, sounds like a criminal act, cause believe you me, I didn't know they could do that as I'm sure many others didn't know that either. Exactly which banks do that, maybe there is some class-action in there somewhere. Make banks responsible for their philfering of the poor with their so-called twisted courtesy agenda !
