Comments:

I have been with Chase bank for numerous years and in those years Chase has made a substantial profit from me by charging me 35 dollars per transactions for insufficient funds. Even when the charge against my account is two dollars I get charge 35 dollars. For the past five years I have accumulated over 20,000 thousands dollars of insufficient fees. Before I use my debit card I call up the bank to make sure I have sufficient funds. When I do use it I later find out that the charges from other vendors were not withdrawn immediately and thus leaving me short for the other charges, hence a insufficient fund fee apply. Chase should not be allowed to profit from this scam at the expense of hard working people like myself. In fact, Chase should be forced to return the fees back to their customers. regards, Louis Anndeherz
