

From: Linda Edquist <ljdenver@aol.com> on 07/25/2008 12:15:04 PM

Subject: Regulation AA

Jul 25, 2008

Federal Reserve Board Email comments

Dear Email comments,

Parents struggle to support their children while in college. Credit card companies swamp our children with easy, quick offers for credit cards! This creates early financial problems for the students, who have not had these cards before. The companies do not care in the least that a student has never had credit, gets a half a dozen all at the same time. By the time parents realize or are told about these cards a credit problem sometimes has already occurred. What happens when a parent that is struggling to put their child thru college has to help with the problems that arise from the solicitations. And, what about the financially struggling student desperately trying to put himself thru school so as not to burden a single parent and gets caught up in charging books, etc and can't pay because he is trying to concentrate on his dream of college education! There need to be some morals in this country. Some concern for people and NOT everything to be about money!

.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Linda Edquist
14 Pinyon Pine Rd
Littleton, CO 80127-3505