Comments:

Thank God! The article in today's issue of USA Today is one of the most uplifting pieces of news I have read all year. Just look around, who owns the biggest sky scrapers? The credit card companies or insurance companies (no additional comment on these shysters!). My husband and I recently read Alan Greenspan's book, "A time of Turbulance," Mr. Greenspan states free enterprise is what keeps America's economy working. I am sure he doesn't mean free enterprise for the few out of control, greedy, overpaid executives at the price of tens of thousands of Americans. Their actions scream "REGULATE ME! It's definitely a call to action for the Fed. Thank you for hearing the shouts of us middle class hard working Americans and thanks for taking this action! Now, please go collect the payroll taxes that have not been paid by hundreds of businesses, as seen on Monday night's evening news. Do what my credit card company would do to me if I defaulted on a payment. Put a lien on everything I own, until it's paid off. Sincerely, Ruthann P (Bullhead City, AZ)
