I agree with the proposed changes. Too many people have been harmed by current practices. In addition, because credit card companies have been allowed to raise card holders' rates, for any reason, you should also deal with this issue in an aggressive way. During the Bush Administration, Congress seemed to be working for the Credit card companies, rather than for the American people. You should put regulations in place that put a reasonable cap on interest rates charged. Also, do not allow them to raise interest rates retroactively or for no good reason. They are definitely harming our country's financial well-being - for profit and greed! Thank you, Jacqueline Feulner
