Comments:

I have been credit counseling for over thirteen years and know the importance of people who are in financial distress being able to meet with and have a relationship with a local counselor. Many of the services that people have in other areas of their life are large generic distant businesses where no one takes a personal interest in them or their success. Many of the clients we meet with come in for additional budgeting help to make sure they will be successful. If our local office is not even listed as a potential resource it will most likely be very difficult for us to remain in operation. Please make certain that people at least have the choice of a "human contact" in their own community.
