It amazes me to think that the U. S. government truly believe that the American consumer is so stupid that they cannot comprehend anything that is written in English and now in Spanish. Eliminating YSP does not solve what you believe to be the problem as to steering a consumer into a higher rate for the benefit of the originators pockets. come on people we only have 2 programs conventional and government. we are all competing for the same customer on a retail and wholesale level. Eliminating YSP does not protect the consumer this is a propaganda to make sure that the banks make more money. Pure and simple Communism a Socialist government. We all work for the same pay no one allowed to make more than a certain dollar amount. do you truly believe this is helping the consumer? how about looking into the banks adding guideline on top of your so called government programs and allowing the banks to cherry pick customers to make their books look better.
