To whom it may concern:

It is time to call on officials in Washington to take action against credit card interchange fees. As a small business manager, I have closely followed along as Senator Dodd crafted his financial reform bill.

I was discouraged that the credit card swipe fee regulation was not included in the bill, particularly since this is an issue that Senator Dodd is aware of and it's impact on small businesses in America, particularly in Connecticut.

I appreciate the Federal Reserve for providing us with a platform to make our voices heard. It is time to step up and make credit card swipe fee regulation a reality.

Sincerely,
