Comments:

Big banks should not be able to avoid the rules that require them to reinvest in communities. Banks get all kinds of special subsidies that aren't available to regular folks--they should have to give back to the communities they are in. These are the institutions that took down our economy with their reckless, poorly regulated behavior. Any and all loopholes should be firmly closed that allow banks to continue risky business while keeping "outstanding" grades on their investment practices. For the sake of our country's economic health, make an "outstanding" grade actually mean something.
