Series Information

The Special Credit Restraint Program originally called for monthly reports on lending activity at large domestic banks, bank holding companies, and U.S. agencies and branches of foreign banks. Monthly reports were also requested on commercial paper issues and overseas borrowing of a panel of large corporations and on business credit outstanding at large finance companies. Quarterly reports on lending were required from intermediate-sized banks ($300 million to $1 billion in total assets). Smaller banks were exempted from reporting under this program.
