Given that no feasible alternative to the current payment processors exists it's absolutely absurd that they are able to completely refuse to serve people that are not in violation of any law. Their ubiquity in addition to their selective enforcement of what constitutes a reputational risk is nothing less than a deliberate, heinous attempt to destroy subcultures that they deem undesirable and silence the voices of hundreds of thousands of people. This cannot be allowed to continue if the internet is to remain a bastion of free speech and expression.
