Renters, Homeowners & Investors: Paul Kaboth

PAUL KABOTH: I think that's one of the first things we've all learned - we speak of housing in general but it was clear from, you know, many of the panels that housing has, you know, the cliché is is very local and it's variable even within MSAs or cities themselves. So we need to think through how these ideas that we're getting from really smart and focused people who have been doing this work for a while can -- we can implement them in the appropriate manner. And when I say we, I don't just mean government agencies or the Federal Reserve but I mean community practitioners, elected officials, for profit organizations. I think we all recognize through the event today that there's room and space for all of us to make a difference in this area.
