2015 Annual Report to the Congress on the Presidential $1 Coin Program

Background

Pursuant to section 104 of the Presidential $1 Coin Act of 2005 (Public Law 109-145), the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (Board) is required to submit an annual report to the Congress that includes an assessment of the remaining obstacles to the efficient and timely circulation of $1 coins; consultations with industry representatives, the vending industry, and other coin-accepting organizations to encourage the acceptance of $1 coins; and recommendations for legislative action that the Board may determine to be appropriate.

Recent Activities

The United States Mint has not produced Presidential $1 coins for circulation since December 2011, but continues to produce them for collectors.¹ As a result, the Federal Reserve Banks (Reserve Banks) meet depository institution demand with existing $1 coin inventories. In the past year, the Federal Reserve met with depository institutions and gathered feedback about demand for $1 coins and potential obstacles to their circulation.² Similar to their feedback in previous years, depository institutions indicated that there are no operational challenges associated with distributing the $1 coin, and they have not reported any questions on the topic. Board staff also received no inquiries on this topic.

$1 Coin Inventories

Reserve Bank inventories of $1 coins decreased by about $37 million over the past year, to approximately $1.32 billion as of June 30, 2015 (see table). Inventories are about $1.25 billion more than the Reserve Banks held before the start of the Presidential $1 coin program. Assuming continuation of current levels of demand, Reserve Bank inventories will continue to decrease slowly over time. We estimate that Reserve Banks currently hold sufficient $1 coin inventory to meet demand for 30 years.

² Beginning in 2008, the Federal Reserve and the United States Mint agreed to meet with their respective coin user groups through normal channels each year of the program and share feedback as appropriate.

Note: Reserve Bank payments to circulation do not include the $1 coins that the United States Mint has issued directly into circulation. The United States Mint has indicated that it issued directly to circulation $77 million Native American $1 coins through its Direct Ship program in 2011, and $1.4 million in 2012. The program was discontinued in early 2012.

Information on the Federal Reserve's $1 coin inventory levels, payments to circulation, and receipts from circulation is available on the Board's public website at http://www.federalreserve.gov/paymentsystems/coin_data.htm and is updated quarterly.
